

جَوَالِيَةُ الْإِسْلَامِيَّةِ

Annales 49 • 2015
islamologiques

INSTITUT FRANÇAIS D'ARCHÉOLOGIE ORIENTALE

AnIsl 49 - 2015

DOSSIER

sous la direction de
Monica BALDA-TILLIER
et Adam TALIB

Arabic Literature, 1200-1800:
A New Orientation

- Monica BALDA-TILLIER 3 Introduction
Adam TALIB
- Guy RON-GILBOA 7 Pre-Islamic Brigands in Mamluk Historiography.
Taqī al-Dīn al-Maqrīzī's Account of "The Brigands Among the Arabs"
- Monica BALDA-TILLIER 33 L'épuisement d'un genre littéraire ?
Le Ġawānī al-ašwāq fī ma'ānī al-ʿuṣṣāq d'Ibn al-Bakkā' (m. 1040/1630)
- Danilo MARINO 55 Raconter l'ivresse à l'époque mamelouke.
Les mangeurs de haschich comme motif littéraire
- Kais NAOUALI 81 La poésie enchâssée dans la chronique d'Ibn Iyās.
Le cas d'al-Salamūnī (854/1450-apr. 925/1519)
- Maurice A. POMERANTZ 99 An Epic Hero in the Maqāmāt?
Popular and Elite Literature in the 8th/14th Century
- Adam TALIB 115 A New Source for the Poetry of Ibn Maṭrūḥ (1196-1251)

VARIA

- Yūsuf RĀĠIB 145 Lettre relative à la location d'une chambre au début du III^e/IX^e siècle
- خالد حسين محمود 161 جريمة اغتصاب النساء في بلاد المغرب
١٠٥٢-٧٤٠ هـ / ١٢٢-٤٤٣ هـ م
- Manuel SARTORI 193 Les emplois du tour kāna... sa-/sawfa yafʿalu
en arabe écrit contemporain

Système de translittération

consonnes				voyelles
ء	'	ز	z	ق	q	longues :	ا ā اِ ī و ū
ب	b	س	s	ك	k	diphthongues :	aw, ay
ت	t	ش	š	ل	l
ث	ṭ	ص	ṣ	م	m	autres conventions
ج	ǧ	ض	ḍ	ن	n	tā' marbūṭa = a, at (état construit)
ح	ḥ	ط	ṭ	هـ	h	article : al- et -l- (même devant les «solaires»)
خ	ḫ	ظ	ẓ	و	w
د	d	ع	ʿ	ى	y
ذ	ḏ	غ	ġ
ر	r	ف	f

Le système de translittération suivi par les publications arabisantes de l'Ifao est explicité dans le document téléchargeable sur le site de l'institut:

<http://www.ifao.egnet.net/publications/publier/normes-ed/>

ADAM TALIB*

A New Source for the Poetry of Ibn Maṭrūḥ (1196-1251)

♦ ABSTRACT

This article discusses the oldest surviving manuscript of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān, which was not used to prepare any of the four printed editions of this work. The article also presents a number of challenging literary-historical issues in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's oeuvre in the hopes of outlining the complexities of his poetic career and identifying future avenues for research.

Keywords: Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Ayyubid poetry, manuscripts, textual criticism, Arabic poetry, Crusades.

♦ RÉSUMÉ

Cet article étudie le plus ancien manuscrit existant du Dīwān d'Ibn Maṭrūḥ, qui n'a été utilisé dans aucune des quatre éditions imprimées de ce recueil. Il soulève aussi plusieurs questions historico-littéraires qui apparaissent dans l'œuvre d'Ibn Maṭrūḥ, afin de souligner la complexité de sa carrière poétique et d'ouvrir la voie à de nouvelles recherches sur le sujet.

Mots-clés : Ibn Maṭrūḥ, poésie ayyubide, manuscrits, critique textuelle, poésie arabe, croisades.

* Adam Talib, The American University in Cairo, atalib@aucegypt.edu

PERHAPS owing to their political careers, the Egyptian poet Ǧamāl al-Dīn Yaḥyā b. ʿĪsā b. Maṭrūḥ (592-649/1196-1251) and his close friend and compatriot Bahāʾ al-Dīn Zuhayr (581-656/1186-1258) have received considerably more attention than other Arabic poets active in the period from 1200 to 1800.¹ Bahāʾ al-Dīn Zuhayr has the distinction of being the first Arabic poet to have had his complete works translated into English and Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān has been published four times in the past century and a half; three times in the past thirty years.² This state of affairs runs counter to the widely acknowledged scholarly disregard for Arabic literature produced during the period 1200-1800. It is regrettable, however, that in the case of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poetry this exceptional attention has not achieved much. Indeed it is typical of the field of pre-modern Arabic literature that subsequent editions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān have not built on previous efforts and have failed to make use of the oldest manuscript source of the Dīwān.³ It is perhaps due to the preceding that they have not made much of an impact on our understanding of 13th-century Arabic poetry.

Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān was first printed in Constantinople at al-Ǧawāʾib Press on 15 Raǧab 1298/13 June 1881 in an edition prepared by the in-house editor (muṣaḥḥiḥ) Yūsuf al-Nabhānī.⁴ It was printed at the end of the Dīwān of ʿAbbās b. al-Aḥnaf (d. before 193/809) and included a long excerpt from Ibn Ḥallikān's (d. 681/1282) Wafayāt al-aʿyān wa-anbāʾ abnāʾ al-zamān recounting the poet's life.⁵ This edition of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān is 54 pages long and contains 106 poems by him, a total of 818 verses. There is no mention of the source-text(s) used to create this editio princeps, but it was almost certainly one or both of the two manuscripts of the Dīwān available in Istanbul libraries.⁶ The Dīwān of Ibn Maṭrūḥ is preserved in the following Mss, the oldest of which (SOAS Arabic Ms 13248) is the subject of this article.

1. I would like to thank the journal's anonymous peer reviewers and Geert Jan van Gelder for their incisive comments and corrections. I would also like to thank Nicolas Michel and Sylvie Denoix for supporting this special issue and Monica Balda-Tillier for inviting me to co-edit it with her. I am grateful to the librarians at the School of Oriental and African Studies (London), The American University in Cairo, Institut dominicain d'études orientales (Cairo), and Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin where I undertook research for this article. I would also like to thank Adam Gacek and Elias Muhanna for their help with an inquiry about the donor of the SOAS Ms.

2. The edition and translation of Bahāʾ al-Dīn Zuhayr's poetry was undertaken by Edward Henry Palmer (1840-1882), the Cambridge Arabist who was killed during a secret mission to Egypt during the ʿUrābī rebellion. It was published in 1876-1877. Information about Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān is given below and in the bibliography.

3. In addition to the manuscript that is the subject of this article, the editors failed to make use of ʿUmar Wafīq Ṣābir's 1994 MA Thesis.

4. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Nabhānī (ed.), p. 218. On the publishing house established by Aḥmad Fāris al-Šidyāq (1804-1887), see Alwan, 1977 and Roper, 2007. Yūsuf al-Nabhānī (1849-1932) was a Palestinian scholar of Islam, judge, and prolific author and poet.

5. The title of the omnibus is Dīwān Abī al-Faḍl al-ʿAbbās b. al-Aḥnaf wa-fi āḥirihi Dīwān Ǧamāl al-Dīn Yaḥyā b. Maṭrūḥ al-Miṣrī. The relevant section in Ibn Ḥallikān's biographical dictionary can be found on pages 219-224 of the Dīwān or in Ibn Ḥallikān, Wafayāt al-aʿyān, VI, pp. 258-266; Ibn Khallikān's Biographical Dictionary, IV, pp. 144-151. See also, on the poet, Talib, 2016; Rikabi, 1968; Brockelmann, GAL, 1898-1942 [repr. 1943-1949], vol. 1, p. 263, Suppl. 1, p. 465; Kaḥḥāla, 1957, vol. 13, p. 217-218.

6. This issue is discussed by ʿAwaḍ Muḥammad al-Šālīḥ in the introduction to his edition of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān.

Manuscripts of the Dīwān

SOAS Arabic Ms 13248 [Symbol: SOAS]

82 poems over 27 folios. A total of 577 verses.⁷ The poems in this Ms are indexed to the four printed editions in the concordance that is appended to this article. This Ms—the oldest surviving recension of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān—is a 15th-century copy and shares a codex with the Dīwān of Ibn al-Nabīḥ (d. 619/1222).⁸ The Ms is not dated but the copyist 'Alā' al-Dīn al-Ḥalabī—known as Ibn Šams—died in 856/1452. The codex was donated to SOAS by one E.J. Portal on 31 August 1921.⁹

Köprülü (Istanbul) Ms 1266 [Symbol: K]

29 folios. This Ms of the Dīwān begins with SOAS 1. In his 1911 description of the Köprülü collection of Arabic manuscripts, Otto Rescher wrote that the manuscript is not dated and “barely more than two hundred years old”, but 'Awaḍ Muḥammad al-Šāliḥ reports that it was written at the end of Rabī' al-Awwal 1012/1603 and was copied by one 'Imrān b. Muḥammad al-Mağribī.¹⁰ Al-Šāliḥ's dating is corroborated by the more recent catalogue of Köprülü manuscripts, though this only records that the Ms was copied in the 10th/17th century.¹¹ The Ms is part of the Fazıl Ahmed Paşa collection.

Baghdad Awqāf Ms 490 [Symbol: Baghdad]

Copied in 1044/1634 by Ramaḍān b. Mūsā al-'Uṭayfī (1019-1095/1610-1684).¹² According to Ḥusayn Naṣṣār, this Ms of the Dīwān follows the same ordering of Mss K and V (see below).¹³ The Dīwān is part of a collection (mağmū'), which also includes the Dīwāns of al-Šābb al-Zarīf (661/1263-688/1289), Ibn al-Nabīḥ (d. 619/1222), Ḥusām al-Dīn al-Ḥāğirī (d. 622/1225), and Maṅğak (d. 1080/1669).¹⁴

7. See Gacek, 1981, no. 58.

8. See Gacek, 1981, no. 59.

9. Personal communication with SOAS library staff. Prof. Elias Muhanna put me in touch with Prof. Adam Gacek who had no additional information about the identity of this donor.

10. Rescher, 1911, pp. 174-175, no. 16; Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Šāliḥ (ed.), p. 252.

11. Şeşen et al., 1986, vol. 2, p. 44.

12. On al-'Uṭayfī, see al-Munağğid, Wild (eds.), 1979.

13. Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 25.

14. See Ṭalas, 1953, pp. 319-320.

British Library Ms OR 3853 [Symbol: BriLib₁]

42 poems over 15 folios.¹⁵ The poems in this copy of the Dīwān are arranged alphabetically by rhyme-letter. Copied in Radāʿ al-ʿArṣ (Yemen) in 1088/1677. This version of the Dīwān begins, like Ms Rylands (see below), with Amīn 26 (see discussion of this poem and its disputed authorship below). It ends with a dūbayt poem (Amīn Rub.2).

Veliyüddin Efendi (Beyazit State Library, Istanbul) Ms 3208 [Symbol: V]

Like the 1881 al-Nabhānī edition, this recension shares a codex with the Dīwān of ʿAbbās b. al-Aḥnaf, which precedes it.¹⁶ According to Ḥusayn Naṣṣār, this recension follows the order of Ms K and was copied in 1122/1710.¹⁷

John Rylands (Manchester) Ms 464 [476] [Symbol: Rylands]

37 poems over 18 folios. The poems in this copy of the Dīwān are arranged alphabetically by rhyme-letter. The Ms is not dated, but Mingana suggests the copy was made *ca.*1720. It begins—like Ms BriLib₁—with Amīn 26 (see discussion of this poem and its disputed authorship below). It ends with al-Nabhānī 78 (see discussion of this poem below).¹⁸

Ḥaram Library (Mecca) Ms [Symbol: Mecca]

143 Poems. Ḥusayn Naṣṣār is the only editor to have used this Ms. He describes it briefly in the introduction to his edition but does not give a shelfmark.¹⁹ According to him, the end of the Ms was missing from the copy he used. This Ms of the Dīwān begins with SOAS 1 and ends with SOAS 26. The Ms contains no information about the copyist or date or location of copying, but Naṣṣār records a reader's note dated 1089/1678.²⁰

Berlin Ms Sprenger 1127-1 [Symbol: Berlin₁]

This Ms and Ms Berlin₂ (see below) share a single codex and 66 folios between them. Ms Sprenger 1127-1 falls on ff. 1, 2, 7-24, and 53-66. This Ms begins with al-Nabhānī 62 followed by al-Nabhānī 75; it ends with Amīn 88. It was copied by al-Darwīṣ Muḥammad b. Muḥammad al-Harīrī al-Ḥalabī around 1750 according to Ahlwardt.²¹

15. See Rieu, 1871, no. 1073-1 and Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), p. 259.

16. See Defter-i Kütüphanesi Velîyüddin, 1304/1886, p. 283.

17. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 25.

18. See Mingana, 1934, pp. 772-773.

19. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 28.

20. The Ms is not catalogued in either Muṭīʿ al-Raḥmān, ʿĪd, 2006-2007, or al-Muʿallimī, 1996.

21. Ahlwardt, 1887-1899, vol. 7, no. 7754.

Berlin Ms Sprenger 1127-3 [Symbol: Berlin₂]

This Ms of the Dīwān shares a codex with the previous Ms.²² Ms Sprenger 1127-3 falls on ff. 25-29, 41-52. It includes a unique introduction by the anonymous compiler of the collection.²³ The collection begins with Amīn 98 and ends with Amīn 93.

Zāhiriyya Library (Damascus) Ms 9982-tā' [Symbol: Damascus]

41 poems over 15 folios. Ḥusayn Naṣṣār is the only editor to have used this Ms.²⁴ It follows an order similar to the one found in Mss Rylands and BriLib₁.²⁵ The Ms is not dated but Naṣṣār records a reader's mark dated 1283/1866. It begins with SOAS 9 and ends with al-Nabhānī 103. It is unlikely that it ends with Naṣṣār 208 as Naṣṣār has it in his edition. This poem, attributed elsewhere to Abū Firās al-Ḥamdānī (320-357/932-968), is rather part of the anthology that follows on from the Dīwān of Ibn Maṭrūḥ in this codex. Naṣṣār says that a copy of this Ms is available at the Juma Almajid Center for Culture and Heritage (Dubai); one of two copies of Mss of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān available at that library.

British Library Ms ADD 7580 Rich [Symbol: BriLib₂]

An anonymous poetry anthology containing a single poem of 12 verses by Ibn Maṭrūḥ (al-Nabhānī 75).²⁶ Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poetry is cited in numerous pre-modern anthologies so al-Ṣāliḥ's use of this particular Ms anthology in his edition cannot be regarded as systematic.

Printed Editions of the Dīwān

The Dīwān has been published a total of four times in editions based on one or more of the above manuscripts, except for the oldest manuscript (Ms SOAS) which has never been used. A concordance of these editions and Ms SOAS is appended to this article. NB: throughout this article, I refer to Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poems by their left-most position in the concordance table found in the appendix.

Yūsuf al-Nabhānī (ed.), Constantinople, 1298/1881

106 poems; a total of 818 verses.

22. See Ahlwardt, 1887-1899, vol. 7, no. 7755.

23. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Amīn (ed.), pp. 63-64.

24. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), pp. 27-28.

25. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 27.

26. See Rieu, 1846, no. 630-2; and also Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), p. 273.

Ğawda Amīn (ed.), Cairo, 1989

Based on al-Nabhānī edition and Mss K, BriLib₁, Berlin₁, Berlin₂. 232 poems divided into four sections: the Dīwān, a section of seven rubāʿiyyāt (scil. dūbayt poems), and two supplements of poems found in other sources: one of poems attributed exclusively to Ibn Maṭrūḥ (mulḥaq 1) and one of poems attributed to him as well as others (mulḥaq 2). In the concordance these appendices are coded as Rub, M₁, and M₂ respectively. A few poems are unique to this edition. A total of 1768 verses.²⁷

ʿAwaḍ al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), Benghazi, 1995

Based on al-Nabhānī edition and Mss K, BriLib₁, Rylands, Berlin₁, and BriLib₂. 185 poems, including some unique to this edition. A total of 1376 verses.

Ḥusayn Naṣṣār (ed.), Cairo, 2009

Based on al-Nabhānī edition and Mss K, V, Baghdad, BriLib₁, Damascus, and Mecca; Ms Rylands was consulted but not used. 261 poems, including all of those in the al-Nabhānī edition and some unique to this edition. A total of 1998 verses.

It is regrettable that these scholars spent a great deal of time and energy going over old ground while at the same time failing to incorporate the oldest source of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān in their editions. SOAS Arabic Ms 13248 does not contain any poems not extant in the printed editions of the Dīwān, but the order of poems it preserves is unique, it offers many textual variants, and indeed the selection of the poems in the manuscript itself is important evidence for the reception of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's literary production. It is worth noting, too, that Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān is appended to the Dīwān of Ibn al-Nabīḥ (d. 619/1222) in Ms SOAS. The copy of Ibn al-Nabīḥ's Dīwān preserved in the Ms codex was copied in 848/1444 and it is likely that the Dīwān of Ibn Maṭrūḥ was copied around the same time.²⁸ The colophon of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān is not dated but it states that the copy was made by one 'Alā' al-Dīn al-Ḥalabī—known as Ibn Šams—a copyist at al-Madrasa al-Ğamāliyya (Aleppo) who died in 856/1452.²⁹ The bundling of these two Dīwāns by two Ayyubid-era, 7th/13th-century Egyptian poets into a single codex betokens an indigenous literary history based on chronology, geography, and genre that was the direct forerunner of our orientalist literary history, which has sidelined the careers and legacies of poets like Ibn al-Nabīḥ and Ibn Maṭrūḥ. These poets remain important in Arabic-language scholarship because they are associated with a particular historical narrative that continues to be politically relevant for Arab scholars (especially Egyptians), but they are remembered for their political careers as much as their poetry.

27. This edition is mentioned in Claude Gilliot's 1991 round-up of editions (pp. 361-362).

28. Gacek, 1981, no. 59.

29. See SOAS Arabic Ms 13248, f. 92b, and Gacek, 1981, no. 58.

The clearest example of this trend is the attention devoted to a poem—purportedly by Ibn Maṭrūḥ—on the occasion of Louis IX's defeat at the Battle of Fariskur on 3 Muḥarram 648/7 April 1250 and his subsequent imprisonment.³⁰ The poem is given in all four of the printed editions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān but it does not occur in the oldest recension (Ms SOAS) so I refer to it here as al-Nabhānī 11. The poem was well known in the pre-modern period and while it is not found in Ms SOAS it is found in many other near-contemporary and later sources, including several of the Mss used to prepare the printed editions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān.³¹ Nevertheless, we cannot be certain of the poem's authenticity without further investigation. This is no impediment, however, to the poem's popularity, which continues to this day: the first two words of the poem “qul li-l-Faransī” turns up more than 200,000 hits on Google and the poem itself was even featured in a sermon on the virtues of Egypt (faḍā'il Miṣr) by the extremist Saudi cleric Muḥammad al-ʿArīfī broadcast on the Murīd al-Ġanna satellite television channel on 22 December 2012.³²

وقال عندما كسر ملك المعظم الفرنسي واعتقله بدار فخر الدين بن لقمان
 وقيده بقيد من ذهب ووكل به خادماً يسمى صبيحاً: [من السريع]

[١] قُلْ لِلْفَرَنْسِيِّسِ إِذَا جِئْتُهُ مقالَ صِدْقٍ مِنْ قَوْلِ فَصِيحٍ
 [٢] أَجْرَكَ اللَّهُ عَلَى مَا مَضَى مِنْ قَتْلِ عُبَّادِ يَسُوعَ الْبَسِيحِ
 [٣] قَدْ جِئْتَ مِصْرًا تَبْتَغِي أَخْذَهَا تَحْسُبُ أَنَّ الزَّمَرَ يَا طَبْلُ رِيحٍ
 [٤] فَسَاقَكَ الْحَيْنُ إِلَى أَدْهَمَ ضَاقَ بِهِ عَنْ نَاطِرِيكَ الْفَسِيحِ
 [٥] رَحْتَ وَأَصْحَابِكَ أَوْدَعَتْهُمْ بُقْبُحِ أَفْعَالِكَ بَطْنِ الضَّرْبِخِ
 [٦] خَمْسُونَ أَلْفًا لَا يُرَى مِنْهُمْ إِلَّا قَتِيلٌ أَوْ أُسِيرٌ جَرِيحٍ
 [٧] فَرَدَّكَ اللَّهُ إِلَى مِثْلِهَا لَعَلَّ عَيْسَى مِنْكُمْ يَسْتَرِيحُ
 [٨] إِنْ كَانَ بَابَاكُمْ بِذَا رَاضِيًا فَرُبَّ غِشٍّ قَدْ أَتَى مِنْ نَصِيحِ
 [٩] فَاتَّخِذُوهُ كَاهِنًا إِنَّهُ أَنْصَحُ مِنْ شِقِّ لَكُمْ أَوْ سَطِيحِ
 [١٠] وَقُلْ لَهُمْ إِنْ أَضْمَرُوا عَوْدَةً لِأَخِذْ ثَأْرًا أَوْ لِقَصْدِ صَحِيحِ
 [١١] دَارُ ابْنِ لُقْمَانَ عَلَى عَهْدِهَا وَالْقَيْدُ بَاقٍ وَالطَّوَاشِي صَبِيحِ

30. Louis IX (1214-1270) participated in the seventh crusade and died at the beginning of the eighth. He was canonized by Pope Boniface VIII in 1297.

31. The poem can be found in various forms (in chronological order) in: al-Dawādārī, Kanz, VII, pp. 384-385; al-Yūnīnī, Ḍayl, II, p. 212; Abū al-Fidāʾ, al-Muḥtaṣar, III, p. 142; al-Kutubī, Fawāt, I, p. 232; al-Ṣafadī, al-Wāfi, X, p. 315; Ibn Ḥaldūn, Tārīḥ, V, p. 418; al-Qalqaṣandī, Ṣubḥ, VIII, p. 38 (cf. n. 1); al-ʿAynī, ʿIqd, I, pp. 30-31; Ibn Taḡribirdī, al-Nuḡūm, VI, pp. 369-370; al-Manḥal, III, p. 441; al-Suyūṭī, Ḥusn, II, p. 37.

32. See <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wno_o6cY7UQ>.

1. Tell the Frenchman when you see him,
Sincerely, from a loquacious and eloquent man,
2. May God reimburse you for what has passed:
the deaths of the worshippers of Jesus Christ (Yasū' al-masīḥ).³³
3. You came to Egypt, wanting to seize her;
You thought that the [sound of] pipes blowing was just the wind, you drum!
4. But then death drove you toward a black steed
And the open spaces before your eyes became narrowed.
5. You left after you deposited your companions —because of your despicable behavior—in the bottom of their crypts.
6. Fifty thousand, none of them can be seen who aren't dead or wounded, taken prisoner.
7. May God bring you another day like that one,
Perhaps then Jesus (ʿĪsā) will be relieved of you.
8. If all that has taken place pleases your Pope;
How often has perfidy hidden behind advice?
9. Then take him for your soothsayer for his advice is more sage than that of Šiqq or Saṭīḥ.³⁴
10. And tell them, if they harbor a desire to return, to take their revenge or even for a purpose sound,
11. That Ibn Luqmān's house still stands where it did,³⁵ and the shackles are here, and so is the eunuch Ṣabīḥ.

Sectarian feeling can also be detected in another poem from Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān; one we might call an invective (hiğā') epigram. In this poem (SOAS 55), Ibn Maṭrūḥ derides the people of Damascus for taking Saturday as a leisure day, calling it a Jewish tradition (sunnat al-yahūd).³⁶

[من مخْلَع البسيط]	وقال يهجو أهل دمشق:
وهذه سُنَّةُ الْيَهُودِ	[١] تَخَذْتُمْ السَّبْتَ يَوْمَ عِيدِ
شَرِبْتُمْ الْمَاءَ مِنْ يَزِيدِ	[٢] وَكَانَ يَكْفِيكُمْ ضَلَالًا

33. There are two forms of the name Jesus in Arabic: Yasū' (Syr. Yeshū', Heb. Yeshua') and the Quranic ʿĪsā. Ibn Maṭrūḥ calls the Christian crusaders "worshippers of Jesus Christ" (ʿubbādī Yasū'a l-masīḥ) in line 2 using the form of Jesus' name used by Arabic-speaking Christians, whereas in line 7, when he utters a wish that the crusaders be defeated once more, he uses the Quranic form of Jesus' name.

34. Šiqq and Saṭīḥ: two legendary diviners of the pre-Islamic period (See Carra de Vaux, Fahd, 1996 and Levi Della Vida, Fahd, 1995).

35. According to al-Qalqaṣandī, Ṣubḥ al-a'šā, VIII, p. 38, Louis IX was imprisoned in the house in which the head of the chancery (ṣāḥib dīwān al-inšā') Faḥr al-Dīn Ibrāhīm b. Luqmān would stay when he traveled to Mansoura. The building survives.

36. See Rippin, 1994.

1. You've decided Saturdays should be a day of rest, although that's a Jewish habit.
2. Isn't it impious enough that you drink water from [the river] Yazīd.

The last hemistich of this epigram hinges on a double entendre (tawriya) in which the tributary of the Baradā river is deliberately confused with the ruler who ordered it to be dug, the caliph Yazīd b. Mu'āwiya (d. 683), who is reviled by many Muslims as the villain of the Battle of Karbalā'.

Disputed dāliyya (Amīn 26)

Two of the Mss (Rylands and BriLib₁) used to compile the printed editions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān begin with a poem that is elsewhere said to have been written by Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk (d. 608/1211).³⁷ A marginal comment in Ms Rylands itself corroborates this attribution.³⁸ The poem is also found in Ms Damascus according to Naṣṣār who reports that the order of poems in Mss Rylands, BriLib₁, and Damascus is similar and unlike that of the other Mss he consulted. According to Amīn, Ms BriLib₁ only contains Ibn Maṭrūḥ's ḡazal poetry and can thus be contrasted with Ms SOAS, which includes more of his madīḥ output.³⁹ In addition to making use of Ms SOAS, one hopes that the next editor of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān will be able to establish the different recension traditions represented by the extant Dīwān Mss. In the Dīwān of Ibn Maṭrūḥ, this poem (Amīn 26) survives as a ten-line erotic poem (ḡazal), but in the Dīwān of Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk these verses are part of a much longer (46 vv.) praise poem (madīḥ) for the judge Ġamāl al-Dīn As'ad b. al-Ġalīs. Dīwān editors determine their own strategies for dealing with material whose authorship is disputed and this poem is a lens through which we can see each of the three modern editors' approaches to the problem.

Al-Ṣāliḥ discusses the disputed attribution of the poem, determines that the poem was not written by Ibn Maṭrūḥ, and decides not to include it in his edition of the Dīwān for that reason.⁴⁰ Naṣṣār and Amīn, on the other hand, both include the poem in their edition, but it is only Naṣṣār who acknowledges the poem's disputed attribution in a footnote. Scholarly opinion on the poem's authorship may differ, but there is literary historical value in documenting the poem as it occurs in some of the Mss of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān that have come down to us. Elsewhere I have proposed treating poems like these as poems in parallel in order to cope with situations in which positivist tendencies in literary history encourage us to flatten the complexity and disorder

37. Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk, Dīwān, 'Abd al-Ḥaqq (ed.), 1958; repr. 1975, pp. 206-211; Dīwān, Naṣr (ed.), 1969, II, pp. 86-88. The first line of this poem is an oft-cited example of iktifā' ("truncation").

38. Mingana, 1934, p. 773; Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), p. 262.

39. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 27; Dīwān, Amīn (ed.), p. 56.

40. Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), p. 263. He does, however, include another poem attributed to both Ibn Maṭrūḥ and Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk (Amīn 98).

that surround literary creation, transmission, and reproduction.⁴¹ I find it vital and germane to record and make sense of the fact that for some anthologists, Dīwān-compilers, scribes, and readers in the centuries following Ibn Maṭrūḥ and Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk's deaths, a poem by one could have been plausibly attributed to the other. I find it equally thought-provoking that a ten-line ḡazal poem can exist both on its own as well as within a 46-line madīḥ poem.

In the interest of brevity, I do not reproduce and translate the 46-line madīḥ poem attributed to Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk, rather only the ten-line ḡazal poem attributed to Ibn Maṭrūḥ. However for purposes of comparison, I have numbered the verses as they correspond to the 46-line madīḥ poem found in Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk's Dīwān.

[من الطويل]

- | | |
|--|---|
| فَقَبَّلْتُهُ فِي الْخَدِّ تَسْعِينَ أَوْ إِحْدَى | [١] دَنَوْتُ وَقَدْ أَبْدَى الْكَرَى مِنْهُ مَا أَبْدَى |
| فَمَا أَغْذَبَ الْمَرْعَى وَمَا أَغْذَبَ الْوَرْدَا | [٢] وَأَبْصَرْتُ فِي خَدَّيْهِ مَاءً وَخُضْرَةً |
| لَقَدْ زِدْتَنِي فِيمَا أَشْرَتْ بِهِ رُشْدَا | [٧] أَقُولُ لِنَاهٍ قَدْ أَشَارَ بِتَرْكِهِ |
| فِيَا جَمْرٌ مَا أَذْكَى وَيَا مَاءٌ مَا أَدَى | [٣] تَلَهَّبَ مَاءُ الْخَدِّ أَوْ سَالَ جَمْرُهُ |
| وَهَلَّا أَمَرْتُ الصَّدْرَ أَنْ يَكْتُمَ النَّهْدَا | [٨] فَهَلَّا نَهَيْتَ الثَّغَرَ أَنْ يُغْذِبَ اللَّمَى |
| وَمَنْ كَانَ يَهْوَى الصَّبَابَ لَمْ يَعْرِفِ الشَّهْدَا | [٤] يَلُومُ عَلَيْهِ مَنْ يَهِيمُ بِدُونِهِ |
| فَلَا أَنْعَمْتُ نِعْمَى وَلَا أَسْعَدْتُ سَعْدَى | [٩] بِنَفْسِي مَنْ لَوْ جَادَ لِي بِوَصَالِهِ |
| وَمَا كُلُّ مَصْقُولٍ أَلْطَى يَسْلُبُ الرُّشْدَا | [٥] وَمَا كُلُّ مَعْسُولٍ أَلَمَى يَجْلُبُ الْهَوَى |
| وَمَا ذُقْتُ مِنْهَا لَا سَلَامًا وَلَا بَرْدَا | [١٣] وَفِي الْقَلْبِ نَارٌ لِلْخَلِيلِ تَوَقَّدَتْ |
| عُطَاشٌ وَيَشْفِي تَرْبُهُ الْأَعْيُنَ الرُّمْدَا | [٢٠] وَرَبْعُ الَّذِي أَهْوَاهُ يَزْوِي شَرَابُهُ الـ |

1. I drew near when sleep had revealed what it was going to reveal of him and then I kissed him ninety times or one-and—⁴²
2. I could see the surface of his cheek was moist and verdant:
O pasture so sweet! O rose so delightful!
7. To one who tells me I should leave him, I say:
“By pointing a finger, you’ve only guided me toward him.”
3. The water of his cheek blazed, or [perhaps] its glowing embers flowed,
O embers so sweet-smelling! O water so dew-like!

41. Talib, 2013. This is not exactly the same situation as that described by Paul Zumthor’s notion of mouvance, or Bernard Cerquiglini’s variance, though it is of course related to and derivative of these. See also the discussion of Naṣṣār 81 and Naṣṣār 212 below.

42. This line displays truncation (iktifā') and the reader is expected to supply the implied continuation “one-and[-ninety times]” (iḥdā [wa-tis'in]).

8. Won't you stop your mouth from sweetening your lips?
And won't you order your chest to suppress your sighs?
4. Those who love inferior others blame those who love him:
for the lovers of colocynth know nothing of honey.
9. I'd give my life for one who, if he were to grant me a meeting,
May I never enjoy happiness again after that!
5. Not every sweet-lipped one succeeds in attracting adoration,
And not every smooth-necked one can rob men of their wits.
13. Fire blazes in my heart for this friend (al-ḥalīl)
But I haven't tasted its comfort or its cold (lā salāman wa-lā bardā).⁴³
20. Where the one I love lives, the waters quench the thirsty and the soil cures sore eyes.

Insofar as conflicted attributions are puzzles for editors to tease out and reconcile as best they can, this poem is a particularly rich example of the challenge of parallel poetry in Arabic. Even if we concede, prima facie for the purpose of analysis, that the author of the verses is Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk, we cannot conclude that Ibn Maṭrūḥ or those who composed and copied his Dīwān did not reassemble Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk's madīḥ verses into the ḡazal poem reproduced and translated here. It is implausible that such an intervention would have gone unremarked upon by Ibn Maṭrūḥ's contemporaries, especially in the hothouse atmosphere of Arabic literary circles in which plagiarism was a grave, if common, accusation. Nevertheless even if we are inclined to grant Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk the status of author—tendentious though it may be—we cannot rule out the possibility that Ibn Maṭrūḥ was responsible for this pastiche, if it is indeed a pastiche. I do not want to suggest that Ibn Sanā' al-Mulk repurposed verses originally authored by Ibn Maṭrūḥ, but simply to point to the critical interstice between what we suppose and what the literary historical material reflects. Beyond the question of authorship, such a confused attribution also furnishes us with important information about the reception of these two poets in the tradition and their affinity as artists.

Textual Histories

Elsewhere in the Mss of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān, we encounter another instance of poems in parallel; this time, a rather more typical case of what Bernard Cerquiglini has called variance.⁴⁴ Al-Nabhānī 81 is a 4-line ḡazal poem (recorded in Mss K, V, Berlin₁, Baghdad, and Mecca), which Ibn Maṭrūḥ is said to have sent to one Muẓaffar al-Dīn b. 'Abd Allāh al-Miṣrī. Another poem (Amīn 113, 6 vv.)—which appears in Mss Rylands, BriLib₁, and Damascus, and shares the same

43. This line references the story of Ibrāhīm, also known as Ḥalīl Allāh or the Friend of God, and his salvation from the fire: Quran, XXI, al-Anbiyā', 69; qulnā yā nāru kūnī bardan wa-salāman 'alā Ibrāhīm ("Be cool to Ibrāhīm and do him no harm, O fire, We ordered").

44. Cerquiglini, 1989.

metre (basīṭ) and rhyme-letter (lām) as al-Nabhānī 81—can be read alongside it in parallel.⁴⁵ To facilitate this parallel reading, I will reproduce the text and translations of both poems side-by-side.

Amīn 113

- [١] أَلَيْتَ بِفُتُورِ الْأَعْيُنِ النُّجُلِ
وبالْخُدُودِ إِذَا أَحْمَرَّتْ مِنَ الْخَجَلِ
[٢] وبالْقُدُودِ إِذَا مَا هَزَّهَا هَيْفٌ
وبالْثُّغُورِ إِذَا أَوْمَتْ إِلَى الْقَبْلِ
[٣] لَأَنْتَ عِنْدِي عَلَى مَا فِيكَ مِنْ صَلَفٍ
أَحْلَى مِنَ الْأَمْنِ عِنْدَ الْخَائِفِ الْوَجَلِ⁴⁶
[٤] أَحِبَابُنَا لَا وَمَا بَيْنِي وَبَيْنَكُمْ
مِنَ الْوُدَادِ وَمَا وَدِّي بِمُنْتَقِلِ
[٥] لَئِنْ ظَفِرْتُ بِلُفْيَاكُمْ وَفَزْتُ بِهِ
مَا اسْتَشْرَفْتُ بَعْدَهَا نَفْسِي إِلَى أَمَلِ
[٦] إِنْ قَدَّرَ اللَّهُ أَنْ أَحْظَى بِزُورَتِكُمْ وَهَبْتُكُمْ كُلَّ مَا أَلْقَاهُ مِنْ أَجَلِ

al-Nabhānī 81

- [١] أَلَيْتَ بِفُتُودِ الْهَيْفِ مَيَّلَهَا
سُكْرُ الشَّبَابِ فَمَا تَخْلُو مِنْ الثَّمَلِ
[٢] وبالْعُيُونِ الَّتِي فِي طَرْفِهَا مَرَضٌ
وبالْخُدُودِ إِذَا أَحْمَرَّتْ مِنَ الْخَجَلِ
[٣] وبالْثُّغُورِ إِذَا أَوْمَتْ قَلَائِدُهَا
وَالْقُبْلِ إِلَى الْقَبْلِ
[٤] لَمْ أَلْقَ مُذْ بِنْتُ عَنْكُمْ مَا أُسْرِبُهُ
وَلَيْسَ لِي بَعْدَكُمْ فِي الْعَيْشِ مِنْ أَمَلِ

Amīn 113

- [I] swear by large, languid eyes,
and by blushing cheeks,
- and by a body swayed by slenderness,
and by lips leaning in for a kiss,
- For all that you boast, you're still dearer to me than security to a coward
- My dears, I swear by the love we share—and mine is not a shifting love—that
- If I should have the pleasure of seeing you,
My soul won't look forward to anything else after that.
- If God should will that I have the pleasure of seeing you,
I'd give you all the life I've got.

al-Nabhānī 81

- [I] swear by slender bodies, swayed
by youth's intoxication, not wholly sober,
- And by eyes in whose corners lies illness
and by blushing cheeks,
- and by a neck adorned with necklaces
and by lips leaning in for a kiss
- Since leaving you, not a single thing has given me pleasure, and life holds no hope for me now that you're gone.

45. This poem appears in Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, al-Ṣāliḥ (ed.), no. 119 (five lines).

46. Ms Rylands records a variant of this hemistich (cited in Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 171n):
ahlā min an-nawmi ba'da s-suhdi fi l-muqālī [Dearer than rest after sleepless nights to the eye]

Ms SOAS also helps to clear up a dispute between the editors about an exchange of poems between Ibn Maṭrūḥ and Muḥaḍḍab al-Dīn Ibn al-Ḥiyamī (d. 642/1245).⁴⁷ It is stated in Ms SOAS that Ibn al-Ḥiyamī sent the following poem to Ibn Maṭrūḥ when the latter was working in dīwān al-mawārīt, i.e. the probate office or office responsible for inheritances:⁴⁸

وكتب إليه الشيخ مهذب الدين ابن الخيمي أيام كان على ديوان المواريث:

[من الطويل]

- | | |
|---|--|
| [١] لِمِهْيَارٍ مِصْرٍ أُسْجِلَ الْفَضْلَ عِنْدَنَا | وَأُبْطَلْتُ الدَّعْوَى لِمِهْيَارٍ فَارِسٍ |
| [٢] فَبَيْنَهُمَا فِي التَّنْظِيمِ وَالشَّرِّ إِنَّ هُمَا | شَبَرْتُهُمَا مَا بَيْنَ مَاشٍ وَفَارِسٍ |
| [٣] فَتَيَّ نَظَرَ السُّلْطَانُ فِيهِ مَخَايِلَ (م) | الْدَّرَايَةِ وَالْدِّيَوَانِ نَظَرَةَ فَارِسٍ |
| [٤] فَوَلَاهُ أَمْوَالَ الْمَوَارِيثِ حَامِيًا | بِهِ سَرَّيَهَا مِنْ كُلِّ أَفْزَعٍ فَارِسٍ |
| [٥] كَأَنَّ بَنَ مَطْرُوحٍ أَقَامَ ابْنَ أَحْمَدَ | وَأَحْيَاهُ مِنْ بَعْدِ الْبَلَاءِ ابْنَ فَارِسٍ |
| [٦] فَكُلُّ أَمِيرٍ فِي الْبَلَاغَةِ عِنْدَهُ | غُلَامٌ فَلَا تَبْعَثْ سِوَاهُ بِفَارِسٍ |

بعد البلاء | في المخطوطة: «بعد البلاد» وفي نسخ مطبوعة أخرى «البلى».

1. The Mihyār of Egypt has been granted superiority in abundance, in our view, and so I've given up making claims for the Mihyār of Persia.⁴⁹
2. The distance between them, when it comes to poetry and prose, is like measuring between one who walks and one on horseback.
3. A young man in whom the Sultan could see, like a physiognomist (fāris) sees, signs of intelligence and [the right bearing for] the dīwān.
4. So he put him in charge of the funds of legacies, to protect them from leaking at the hands of those frightened by lions.
5. [It's] as though Ibn Maṭrūḥ resurrected al-Ḥalīl b. Aḥmad, and brought Ibn Fāris back from the grave.⁵⁰
6. Compared to him every rhetorical master is a mere knave (ḡulām), so don't send [my poem rhyming in] fāris to anyone but him!

In his reply to Ibn al-Ḥiyamī, Ibn Maṭrūḥ uses the same metre and rhyme-letter, but he self-consciously does not mimic the recurrent rhyme-word used in the original poem:⁵¹

47. On this author, see 'Amr, 2005, and the numerous biographical sources cited there. This poem does not appear there, however. The other two editions of the Dīwān (Nāḡī and Zāhid (eds.), 2008; Maḥfūz (ed.), 1970) were not available to me.

48. SOAS Arabic Ms 13248, ff. 82b-83a.

49. i.e. Mihyār al-Daylamī (d. 428/1037).

50. Ḥusayn Naṣṣār identifies these as al-Ḥalīl b. Aḥmad (d. 175/791) and Aḥmad b. Fāris al-Lughawī (d. 395/1004): see Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 71n.

51. SOAS Arabic Ms 13248, f. 83a.

فكتب إليه: [من الطويل]

[١] أَبَاعَتْهَا مَلَأَ الْمَسَامِعَ حِكْمَةً
قَوَافٍ تُحَلَّى كَالْعَذَارَى الْعَرَائِسِ
[٢] شَوَارِدُ عَنْ أَذْهَانِ قَوْمٍ شَوَارِدِ
أَوَانِسُ تُزْرِي بِالْحِسَانِ الْأَوَانِسِ
[٣] مُهَذَّبَةٌ جَاءَتْ لَنَا مِنْ مُهَذَّبٍ
تَذِلُّ لَهُ كُلُّ الْقَوَافِي الشَّوَامِسِ
[٤] تَعَزُّ عَلَى مَنْ رَامَهَا غَيْرُ رَبِّهَا
وَتَطْغَى فَمَا تُعْطِي قِيَاداً لِلَامِسِ
[٥] سُدَّاسِيَّةٌ لَوْ قَالَ أَنَّى بِسَابِعٍ
لَهَا أَبْنُ سَلِيمَانَ أَتَى بَعْدَ خَامِسِ
[٦] وَحَاوَلْتُ مِنْهَا الْكِرَاءَ وَالسَّيْنَ فَاخْتَمْتُ
عَلَيَّ بِحَامٍ ذِي أَقْتِدَارٍ وَحَابِسِ
[٧] حَمَيْتُ حِمَاهَا ثُمَّ أَغْلَقْتُ بَابَهَا
وَحَصَّنْتُ مِنْهَا كُلَّ بَيْتٍ بِفَارِسِ

ملء | في مخطوطة SOAS: مل. قواف | في مخطوطة SOAS: قوافي. الشوامس | في مخطوطة SOAS:
الشوامسي. بحام | في مخطوطة SOAS: بخادم. وحصنت | في مخطوطة SOAS: وخضت.

1. O Sender, ears have been filled with wisdom by rhyming verses adorned like virgin brides.
2. Trendy verses that [befuddle the minds of] a befuddled nation, maiden-verses that put beautiful maidens to shame.
3. Refined verses sent to us by a refined man;
all other modest verses are nought compared to it.
4. For anyone but their owner, they're difficult to ride, they disobey, and won't be led by anyone who tries.
5. A six-liner, even if al-Ma'arrī were to say: "Where can one find a seventh [verse]?"
[It would still have to come after a fifth verse].⁵²
6. I gave the R and S a try, but it locked me out, with a powerful protector [between us].
7. You have secured it, locked the gate behind you and stationed a horseman at [the door of] every single house/verse.⁵³

The printed editions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Diwān do not agree on the order and authorship of these two poems. Al-Nabḥānī and Naṣṣār incorrectly identify the author of the first poem as Ibn Maṭrūḥ and the second as Ibn al-Ḥiyamī; whereas Amīn and al-Ṣāliḥ present the poems with the correct attribution as has now been corroborated by Ms SOAS.

52. Naṣṣār identifies Ibn Sulaymān as Abū 'Alā' al-Ma'arrī (see Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Diwān, Naṣṣār (ed.), p. 71n).

53. The final hemistich includes a double entendre (tawriya) that sums up Ibn Maṭrūḥ's reply: the Arabic word bayt means both "dwelling" and "poetic verse" and the horseman (fāris) he refers to is the rhyme-word repeated in each verse of Ibn al-Ḥiyamī's poem.

Poems with recurrent rhyme-words—like Ibn al-Ḥiyamī's poem rhyming in fāris—are not entirely uncommon in classical Arabic poetry.⁵⁴ In Ibn al-Ḥiyamī's poem, the word fāris is repeated at the end of each line, each time meaning something different; a case of ḡinās tāmm (perfect paronomasia or antanaclassis).⁵⁵ A similar, but significantly different, poem in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān (al-Nabhānī 78) gives some idea of the experimentation and diversification of literary styles and forms that was taking place in the period.⁵⁶ The recurrent rhyme-word in this bold praise poem encompasses a ludic dimension that is often only implied in Arabic court poetry.⁵⁷ We cannot know exactly how the poem was performed—if it was indeed performed in front of the sultan as the text suggests—but in order to demonstrate the performative potential of this remarkable poem, I have supplied my own anachronistic and speculative stage directions alongside the translation.⁵⁸

[من الطويل]

- | | |
|--|---|
| إِذَا مَاسَ خِلْتُ الْغُصْنَ مِنْ قَدِّهِ كَذَا | [١] تَعَشَّقْتُ بَدْرًا وَجْهَهُ مُشْرِقُ كَذَا |
| رَمَتْ أَشْهُمًا فِي قَلْبٍ عَاشِقِهِ كَذَا | [٢] لَهُ مُقَلَّةٌ كَخَلَاءٍ نَجْلَاءٍ إِنْ رَنْتَ |
| وَخَرَّ لَهُ كُلُّ الْوَرَى سَجْدًا كَذَا | [٣] تَبَدَّى فَقَالَ النَّاسُ لَا بُدَّ غَيْرُهُ |
| عَلَى خَدِّهِ إِذْ طَالَ مُفْتَكِرًا كَذَا | [٤] أَقُولُ وَقَدْ عَاتَبْتُهُ وَيَمِينُهُ |
| أَرَاكَ ضَجِيعِي لَيْلَةً أَمِنَّا كَذَا | [٥] فَذُنُوكَ حَيَاتِي يَا مُنَى النَّفْسِ هَلْ تُرَى |
| أَتَيْتُكَ فَأَخْفِلُ بِي فَقُلْتُ لَهُ كَذَا | [٦] فَقَالَ وَقَدْ أَبْدَى الْتَبَسُ ضَاحِكًا |
| لِفِيهِ إِلَى أَنْ مَالَ مِنْ سُكْرِهِ كَذَا | [٧] وَبُتَّ عَلَى طِيبِ الْعِنَاقِ مُقْبِلًا |
| عَيُونَ الْأَعَادِي وَالْوُشَاةُ بَنَّا كَذَا | [٨] وَقَالَ أَمَا تَخْشَى الْوُشَاةَ وَتَتَّقِي |
| كَشَفْتُ قِنَاعِي فِيكَ بَيْنَ الْوَرَى كَذَا | [٩] فَقُلْتُ لَهُ وَاللَّهِ يَا غَايَةَ الْمُنَى |
| فَأَطْرَقَ إِذْ أَوْمَى بِإِصْبَعِهِ كَذَا | [١٠] وَيُحِثُّ بِسَرِّي وَأَطْرَحْتُ عَوَازِلِي |
| أَحَبُّ أَكْتِتَامِ الْأَمْرِ قُلْتُ لَهُ كَذَا | [١١] وَقَالَ أَمَا أَنْذَرْتُكَ الْآنَ أَتَنِي |
| سَلَامِي عَلَى مَنْ صِرْتُ فِي حُبِّهِ كَذَا | [١٢] أَلَا يَا نَسِيمَ الرِّيحِ بِاللَّهِ بَلْغِي |
| وَأَهْدَى سَلَامًا مِنْ تَحِيَّتِهِ كَذَا | [١٣] وَقُولِي لَهُ ذَاكَ الْكَتِيبُ أَمَلَنِي |
| يُسَائِلُ عَنْ حَالِي بِأَنْمَلَةٍ كَذَا | [١٤] عَسَاءُ إِذَا وَافَتْ تَحِيَّةُ عَبْدِهِ |
| كَرِيمٍ وَإِلَّا مُتُّ مُعْتَقِدًا كَذَا | [١٥] وَأَقْسَمُ بِاللَّهِ الْعَظِيمِ وَوَجْهِهِ أَلْ |
| وَأُضْبَحَ حَبْلُ الْوَدِّ مَا بَيْنَنَا كَذَا | [١٦] لِئِنْ صَدَّ عَنِّي مُعْرِضًا مُتَدَلِّلًا |
| وَمَنْ جَوْدُهُ فِي النَّاسِ بَيْنَ الْوَرَى كَذَا | [١٧] تَعَلَّقْتُ بِالسُّلْطَانِ أَيُوبَ سَيِّدًا |

54. See van Gelder, 2012, pp. 240-244.

55. See Cachia, 1998, no. 18.

56. This poem is also attributed to al-Naṣṣābī al-Irbilī (d. 657/1259) in al-ʿInnābī's Nuzhat al-abṣār, p. 551. I thank Greet Jan van Gelder for the reference.

57. See Gruendler, 2008.

58. On the use of gestures in poetic performance, see Ibn Rašīq, al-ʿUmda, I, pp. 309-310.

Translation

1. I fell in love with [one as pretty as] a full moon, his face shines like so.

If he sauntered past, you'd think his body were a branch like so.

2. When his large, dark eyes gaze happily, they launch arrows at the heart of his lover like so.

3. When he appears, everyone says "There is no moon but he," and they all prostrate themselves before him like so.

4. After I chastised him, I said to him, as he lay his cheek on his right hand, lost in thought, like so.

5. "I'd give my life for you, O you my soul's only desire, tell me:
Do you think I'll ever share your bed on a guarded night like so?"

6. And he answered, wearing a grin, "I'm here with you now so see to me" and I said, "Like so[!]"

7. And I spent a while in the pleasure of his embrace, kissing his mouth until he, in his drunkenness, listed to one side like so.

8. "Aren't you afraid of the gossips?" he asked, "Don't you want to hide from enemy eyes what with the gossips [surrounding us] like so?"

9. So I said to him, "By God, O object of my dreams, I've come clean with everyone about my feelings for you, like so."

10. "And I've revealed my secret and spurned those who chastise me."
He was silent, his eyes downcast, when he made a signal with his finger like so.

Stage Directions

Frames face with open hands, forming a corona around it

Walks along swaying his body, arm outstretched

Mimics drawing a bow and shooting an arrow

Raises hands on either side of head and lowers them to mimic prostration

Lays cheek against his right hand

Places outstretched index fingers side by side

Gives a cheer and grins widely

Slumps over to one side as if drunk

Hunches shoulders and cranes neck fearfully to cast a look around

Slaps hands together as if getting the dust off of them

Puts index finger against lips to signal silence

- | | |
|---|---|
| 11. And said, “Didn’t I just warn you? I like to keep things discreet?” So I answered, “Indeed, like so.” 12. “O breeze—please God—won’t you give my greetings to the one whom I love who has me like so?” 13. “And tell him that this desperate one put his trust in me to deliver a greeting like so.” 14. Perhaps if he receives his servant’s greeting, he’ll ask how I’m doing, with a flick of his finger, like so. 15. I swear by God and His noble face that I will go to the grave, clinging firmly like so, 16. if he shuns me, turns away from me, teases me, and the bond[s] of affection between us become frayed like so. 17. For I cling to Sultan Ayyūb, my lord, the one, who more than all other men, is generous like so. | Places finger right index finger over each eye in succession Slumps and wraps arms around body to signal illness and despair Puts right hand across heart in gesture of greeting Flicks fingers of right hand as if to shoo or dismiss Holds tightly to an imaginary rope as if hanging from it Raises skirt of garment to expose frayed leggings humorously Stretches arms out to encompass the entire court |
|---|---|

Whether or not the poem was performed with such elaborate action, or merely with hand gestures and body language, the poem’s ludic tone is obvious even on the page. In the first, erotic (ġazal) section of the poem (ll. 1-11), gestures at the ends of lines 3, 5, and at the ends of both hemistichs of the first line illustrate an image or idea mentioned in the line, while the majority of gestures (at the ends of lines 2, 4, 6-11) are specifically associated with a character’s speech. In the second and final section of the poem (ll. 12-17) in which the poet pivots from the erotic to the panegyric, the gestures at the ends of lines 13 and 14 are associated with the poet-persona’s speech, while the gestures at the ends of line 12, 15-17 illustrate an image or idea in the line. If the poem is read as a monologue with one character, the poet-persona narrating and acting out the parts of lover and beloved, then there is no distinction between the two types of gestures I have identified here. Both types enhance the communicative dimension of the poet-persona’s monologue.

The recurrent rhyme-word in this poem and the gestures associated with it can be compared to a similar poem written around the same time, though in a different language and in a different region of the Islamicate world. The Persian poem by Ġalāl al-Dīn Rūmī (604-672/1207-1273) is a ġazal poem not a panegyric poem, but what links the two poems is the rhyme and its gesticulative potential.⁵⁹ In Rūmī’s poem (ġazal no. 1826), a single phrase (called the radīf)—kih hamčunīn (“like so”)—is repeated after the rhyme at the end of each line and at the end of the first hemistich of the first line.⁶⁰ In Rūmī’s poem, the repeated phrase is most often used as an adverb to modify a series of imperative verbs (ll. 1-7, 9, 11), but it is also occasionally used—as in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poem—to enhance dialogue or figures expressed in the poem (ll. 8, 10, 12, 14). It is not clear whether either poet knew of the other's work—and I am not suggesting any relationship between these two poems other than coincidence—but it is clear that the 13th-century literary Zeitgeist deserves further exploration.

59. Arberry, 2009, pp. 233-234, no. 226.

60. See Heinrichs, 1993.

Paratexts

According to paratextual evidence, a number of poems in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān are said—according to the headings of the poems themselves—to have been delivered as letters, though this may have been a literary conceit (see SOAS 11, 14, 16-21, 24, 34-36, 38, 41-4, 47-50, 54; al-Nabhānī 10, 18, 29, 81; Naṣṣār 56, 81, 146, 164). Ibn Ḥallikān notes that Ibn Maṭrūḥ and Bahā' al-Dīn Zuhayr sustained their close friendship by exchanging poems about what was happening in their lives by post.⁶¹ Other headings in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān indicate the events that occasioned, or purportedly occasioned, the poem's composition and delivery, thus linking the literary texts to contemporary events in the poet's private and professional lives. Ceremonial poems include a poem on the occasion of al-Malik al-Muḡīṭ's circumcision (SOAS 10), the capture of Jerusalem in 1239 (al-Nabhānī 13), the construction of a bathhouse (al-Nabhānī 25), and the death of Faḥr al-Dīn Yūsuf b. Muḥammad at the battle of Mansoura on 5 Dū al-Qa'da 647/9 February 1250 (Naṣṣār 131). One five-line poem (al-Nabhānī 9) by Ibn Maṭrūḥ is said to have been written to grace the entrance of a house built by his patron al-Ṣāliḥ Ayyūb (d. 647/1249). Poems inspired by events in Ibn Maṭrūḥ's personal life include a poem on visiting Ibn al-'Adīm (d. 660/1262) after going to the bathhouse (SOAS 33), visiting the tomb of al-Ṣāfi'ī (SOAS 37), visiting the tomb of the Prophet Abraham (Amīn M1.5), a poem to accompany a gift (SOAS 16), and a poem chastizing Ibn Ḥallikān (d. 681/1282) for not visiting (SOAS 36).⁶²

Ms SOAS, like the printed editions of the Dīwān, records a series of poems that Ibn Maṭrūḥ dictated to his kinsman 'Izz al-Dīn 'Alī b. Ġiyāṭ al-Quraṣī, who was permitted to transmit them as well as the date on which he heard them.⁶³ These thirteen poems (a total of fifty-five verses) appear to have been composed in Cairo over a period of less than two weeks from 9-20 Raḡab 648/7-18 October 1250 during which Ibn Maṭrūḥ meditated on his own mortality.⁶⁴ While contemporary and near-contemporary biographers do not agree on the date of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's death, none of them put his death as early as 648/1250.⁶⁵ If we follow Ibn Ḥallikān, who claimed to have been present at his friend's funeral and burial, this sequence

61. Ibn Ḥallikān, Wafayāt, VI, p. 263.

62. On the latter, see Ibn Ḥallikān, Wafayāt, VI, p. 262, and al-'Aynī, Iqd, I, p. 61.

63. These poems are SOAS 60-72.

64. The dates and the location of this activity are recorded in the headings of this poem sequence reproduced in the printed editions as found in some of the Mss of the Dīwān as well as in Ms SOAS, ff. 88b-91a.

65. There are two accounts of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's retirement from public life: (1) Ibn Ḥallikān records that Ibn Maṭrūḥ retired to his home in Cairo after the death of al-Malik al-Ṣāliḥ in Ṣa'bān 647/November 1249 but (2) Ibn Wāṣil records that he continued to serve the Ayyubid administration at a high level until the of poems on impending mortality predate the poet's actual death by nearly a year, and come a year after the death of his one time patron al-Malik al-Ṣāliḥ in Ša'bān 647/November 1249. It appears, according again to Ibn Ḥallikān, that Ibn Maṭrūḥ was depressed and was in danger of losing his sight; this is likely what prompted the poet's meditations on mortality.⁶⁶

Among this sequence, we find a poem that purports to dramatize a conversation between the frightened poet and his fatalist wife (SOAS 71):⁶⁷

[من الطويل]

مِنْ اللَّهِ وَهُوَ الْمُنْعِمُ الْمُتَفَضِّلُ	[١] وَقَائِلَةٌ مَاذَا التَّخُوفُ كُلُّهُ
وَأَتَى عَلَيَّ حِينَ أَقْدَمْتُ أَسْأَلُ	[٢] فَقُلْتُ لَهَا عَلِمِي بِمَا قَدْ جَنَيْتُهُ
يَهُونُ عَلَيْكَ الْأَمْرُ جِدًّا وَأَسْهَلُ	[٣] فَقَالَتْ إِذَا فَكَّرْتُ فِي يَوْمِ مَوْقِفِ
وَلَوْ كُنْتُ ذَا حَزْمٍ لَمَا كُنْتُ أَجْهَلُ	[٤] فَقُلْتُ لَهَا أُرْشِدْتِ لِلْخَيْرِ كُلِّهِ
بِهِ صَارَ فِي كُلِّ الْأُمُورِ التَّوَسُّلُ	[٥] وَيَكْفِيكَ قَوْلُ الْمُصْطَفَى وَهُوَ الَّذِي
خَبَرَ قَالَ اعْقِلُوا وَتَوَكَّلُوا	[٦] وَقَدْ سَأَلُوهُ قَالَ بَلْ أَعْمَلُوا وَفِي

1. When she asked me, "What's with all this worry? Why do you fear God, the Most Gracious Benefactor?"
2. "Because I know what I've done," I told her,
"and I know that when I meet him, I'll be held to account."
3. She said, "If only you'd think of the day you'll stand before God,"⁶⁸
It would all be easier for you to bear."
4. So I said to her, "You've pointed me toward all that is good.
If I were a more resolute man, I wouldn't have been so ignorant."
5. It is enough simply to remember what the Prophet has said, for he is the one who pleads on our behalf in all things,
6. When he was asked, he answered: "Do it." And in another report, he said, "Be reasonable and entrust your fate in God."

The last poem in the sequence is a dūbayt poem that Ibn Maṭrūḥ is said to have uttered when he was "near death" (inda wafātihi), which is followed in Ms SOAS and other Mss by assassination of al-Malik al-Mu'azzam Tūrān-Šāh in Muḥarram 648/May 1250. See Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Dīwān, Amīn (ed.), pp. 29-32.

66. Ibn Ḥallikān, Wafayāt, VI, p. 262 and al-ʿAynī, Iqd, I, 1, p. 61.

67. I reproduce here the Ms SOAS text of the poem, which differs from the printed editions. NB: the final hemistich is defective.

68. See Quran, VI, al-Anʿām, 30.

another five dūbayt poems (six out of seven total dūbayt poems attributed to Ibn Maṭrūḥ).⁶⁹ Many of the poems in the SOAS Ms are short, of what we might call epigrammatic length:

Poem length	Number of poems	Percentage of total (lines)
40 or more lines long	2	22%
20-39 lines long	5	28%
10-19 lines long	6	13%
5-9 lines long	14	15%
3 or 4 lines long	13	8%
1 or 2 lines long	42	14%

Of the 82 poems in the Ms SOAS, 40 of them are two-liners. This is perhaps typical of a broader trend in poetic composition in the 13th century away from performative set-piece poetry; a trend that would only accelerate in the 14th and 15th centuries. Ibn Maṭrūḥ did of course write and deliver long panegyric poems for the political leaders who were his patrons, but he also wrote a number of shorter poems, including poems written to and for his peers. These short poems spanned several genres: elegy (ritāʾ: see al-Nabhānī 7), panegyric (madīḥ: see al-Nabhānī 16), riddle (luġz: see SOAS 47-48), erotic (ġazal: see SOAS 52-53), and invective (hiġāʾ: see SOAS 55-59), and because of their wit and ease of circulation, they proved irresistible to anthologists.⁷⁰ Another example of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's legacy is the emulation of his work by later poets. Al-Šawkānī records in his al-Badr al-ṭāliʿ bi-maḥāsin man baʿd al-qarn al-sābiʿ that the Yemeni poet Aḥmad b. al-Ḥasan b. Aḥmad (d. ca.1080/1669) composed a poem with the same rhyme as Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poem SOAS 5—a panegyric in praise of al-Malik al-Ašraf I (d. 635/1237)—and that it was one of his most outstanding compositions.⁷¹

The heretofore unused SOAS Ms of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān is unlikely to change radically what we know of the poet's career and output, but it is an important source for understanding the contemporary and near-contemporary reception of the poet's work, and it is indeed crucial for understanding the textual history of the poet's Dīwān and its as-yet uninvestigated recensions. It is also a signal example of the rather haphazard treatment of material used for

69. See SOAS 73-78, and also Amīn Rub.2, in the concordance below. On the form itself, see Stoetzer, 1994 and Talib, 2014.

70. The anonymous collector of Ms Berlin₂ uses the term maqāṭiʿ to describe some of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poems. See also al-Šafādī, al-Wāfi, II, pp. 77-78. For more on maqāṭiʿ, see my forthcoming study: How Do you Say "Epigram" in Arabic? (Leiden 2016). Ibn Maṭrūḥ is one of the poets cited in the 15th-century anthology Kitāb naṣr zahr al-ḥadāʾiq wa-durr al-naẓm al-fāʾiq (225 ff.) that was recently sold by Bernard Quaritch of London for £7500 on 24 March 2014. This manuscript was later acquired by the special collections library at NYU Abu Dhabi. I would like to thank Nicholas McBurney of Heywood Hill and Virginia Danielson, Nicholas Martin, and Maurice Pomerantz all of NYU Abu Dhabi for their generous and prompt replies to inquiries about this manuscript.

71. Al-Šawkānī, al-Badr, p. 65.

the study of Arabic literary history. Ibn Maṭrūḥ's name and the vague outline of his poetic career is widely known, but this manuscript of his Dīwān—like its overlooked and underappreciated contents—has something new to tell us, if we only care to look.

Concordance of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poetry

This concordance allows readers to trace versions of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's poems (or those attributed to him) across four printed editions as well as the heretofore unknown and oldest recension of Ibn Maṭrūḥ's Dīwān (SOAS Arabic Ms 13248).

Key: Nab = al-Nabhānī (ed.), A = Amīn (ed.), Ş = al-Şāliḥ (ed.), Naş = Naşşār (ed.), IH = poem by Ibn al-Ḥiyāmī (discussed above), Rub = rubā'īyyāt section in A, M1 = first mulḥaq in A, M2 = second mulḥaq in A.

SOAS	vv.	ff.	Nab	vv.	A	Ş	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	SOAS	vv.	ff.	Nab	vv.	A	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.
1	53	65b-67b	1	55	22	55	1	55	1	55	55	25	6	83b-84a	79	7	21	9	79	2	79	9
2	8	68a	2	9	118	10	2	10	2	19	19	26	3	84a	82	3	38	3	82	3	82	3
3	22	68b-69a	3	22	142	22	3	22	3	22	22	27	4	84a-84b	83	4	31	4	83	4	83	4
4	35	69a-70b	4	35	143	35	4	35	4	35	35	28	6	84b	59	6	17	6	59	6	59	6
5	39	70b-72a	5	38	90	39	5	39	5	41	41	29	4	84b-85a	65	4	16	4	65	4	65	4
6	13	72a-72b	6	13	85	16	6	16	6	16	16	30	5	85a	66	4	150	5	66	5	66	5
7	10	73a	8	10	145	10	8	10	8	10	10	31	2	85a	12	2	37	2	12	2	12	2
8	17	73b-74a	19	16	80	16	19	16	19	17	17	32	2	85a	14	2	39	2	14	2	14	2
9	71	74a-77a	20	71	32	73	20	73	20	73	73	33	2	85b	17	2	133	2	17	2	17	2
10	33	77a-78a	21	33	109	33	21	33	21	33	33	34	2	85b	23	2	107	2	23	2	23	2
11	32	78b-79a	22	32	33	33	22	33	22	33	35	35	2	85b	24	2	29	2	24	2	24	2
12	11	79b-80a	47	11	59	12	47	12	47	12	36	36	2	85b	26	2	78	2	26	2	26	2
13	13	80a-80b	49	27	95	32	49	32	49	31	37	37	2	85b-86a	28	2	99	2	28	3	28	2
14	4	81a	31	4	132	4	31	4	31	4	38	38	2	86a	33	2	40	2	33	2	33	2
15	6	81a	32	6	35	6	32	6	32	6	39	39	1	86a	34	1	75	1	34	1	34	1
16	4	81b	35	4	1	4	35	4	35	4	40	40	2	86a	37	2	73	2	37	2	37	2
17	5	81b	36	5	128	5	36	5	36	5	41	41	2	86a	38	2	97	2	38	2	38	2
18	3	81b-82a	39	3	83	3	39	3	39	3	42	42	2	86b	42	2	30	2	42	2	42	2
19	12	82a-82b	40	12	3	12	40	12	40	12	43	43	2	86b	43	2	151	2	43	2	43	2
20	4	82b	41	4	71	4	41	4	41	4	44	44	2	86b	44	2	10	2	44	2	44	2
IḤ	6	82b-83a	45,1	6	...	...	...	...	...	6	45	45	2	86b	50	2	134	2	50	2	50	2
21	7	83a	45,2	7	77	7	45	7	45,2	7	46	46	2	86b-87a	51	2	116	2	51	2	51	2
22	4	83a-83b	46	4	18	4	46	4	46	4	47	47	2	87a	52	2	19	2	52	2	52	2
23	6	83b	58	6	122	6	58	6	58	6	48	48	2	87a	53	2	56	2	53	2	53	2
24	3	83b	55	3	24	3	55	3	55	3	49	49	2	87a	54	2	84	2	54	2	54	2

Nab	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	Nab	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.
7	2	72	2	7	2	7	5	9	5	45	5	9	5	9	3
11	11	20	11	11	13	11	3	13	3	54	3	13	3	13	6
16	2	9	2	16	2	16	4	18	4	58	5	18	5	18	4
27	4	114	4	27	4	27	6	29	6	135	6	29	6	29	3
48	17	66	20	48	20	48	11	56	11	152	11	56	11	56	15
62	11	47	11	62	11	62	14	72	14	4	14	72	14	72	17
74	20	7	20	74	20	74	11	75	11	136	13	75	14	75	21
77	4	50	4	77	4	77	17	78	17	48	17	78	17	78	4
103	20	100	18	118	21	216
A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.
8	16	109	16	111	16	13	4	132	4	114	4	14	13	129	9
25	17	106	18	127	18	26	10	...	...	125	10	46	2	148	7
53	8	...	...	147	8	60	14	113	14	139	14	61	5	147	5
64	2	152	2	138	2	67	10	111	10	151	10	68	7	...	7
70	7	...	...	150	7	76	27	110	27	159	28	77	7	...	8
86	2	172	2	169	2	87	9	...	...	176	9	88	2	114	13
91	7	141	7	194	7	92	7	135	7	185	6	94	2	149	7
98	20	115	22	195	20	101	17	117	17	218	17	102	11	...	6
105	10	...	...	199	10	111	8	...	...	206	8	112	6	119	5
117	4	140	4	222	4	119	8	120	8	240	8	120	19	...	6
124	7	133	7	223	7	125	9	123	9	224	9	126	13	122	18
130	8	...	...	238	8	137	8	...	...	245	8	138	20	126	12
140	6	130	6	241	7	147	10	125	9	250	14	148	...	124	8
153	12	107	11	255	12	154	7	108	7	258	7	Rub.2	2	...	2
M1.2	5	155	5	113	5	M1.3	2	158	2	...	...	M1.4	2	160	7

A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.	A	vv.	Ş	vv.	Naş	vv.
M1.7	2	164	2	143	2	M1.8	2	163	2	...	...	M1.9	2	165	2	156	2
M1.11	5	167	5	157	5	M1.12	2	178	2	196	2	M1.13	2	168	2	158	2
M1.15	4	171	4	168	4	M1.16	9	173	9	179	9	M1.17	2	174	2	180	2
M1.19	2	176	2	192	2	M1.20	3	177	3	...	...	M1.21	2	182	2	...	...
M1.23	4	185	4	256	4	M2.1	9	...	...	108	9	M2.2	8	...	...	112	8
M2.4	7	...	...	117	7	M2.5	2	...	...	261	2	M2.6	5	...	...	128	5
M2.8	8	...	...	133	8	M2.9	10	...	...	129	10	M2.10	6	...	...	142	6
M2.12	8	...	...	154	8	M2.13	7	...	...	153	7	M2.14	5	...	...	155	6
M2.17	6	...	...	171	6	M2.18	8	...	...	170	8	M2.19	7	...	...	177	7
M2.21	5	150	5	182	5	M2.22	7	...	...	190	7	M2.23	11	142	11	217	11
M2.25	9	...	...	201	9	M2.26	7	...	...	200	7	M2.27	9	...	...	207	9
M2.29	7	137	7	215	7	M2.30	7	138	7	211	7	M2.31	12	...	...	213	12
M2.33	9	...	...	229	9	M2.34	10	...	...	228	10	M2.35	9	...	...	225	9
M2.37	8	...	...	237	8	M2.38	7	...	...	236	7	M2.39	7	...	...	235	7
M2.41	7	...	...	246	7	M2.42	6	...	...	247	6	M2.43	2	153	2	244	2
M2.46	6	...	...	253	7	M2.47	9	...	...	257	9	...	...	162	4	146	4

A 93, M1.6, M2.15, M2. 44, Ş 143-146, 156-157, 161-162, 170, 179-180, 183-184, and Naş 109, 118, 122-124, 126, 130-132, 136-137, 144, 161, 163-165, 167, 174-175, 181, 183, 187-188, 191, 193, 197-198, 202, 204, 208-209, 221, 226, 248-249, 254, 260 are unique to their sources.

Bibliography

Working Tools

- Ahlwardt, Wilhelm, Die Handschriften-Verzeichnisse der königliche Bibliotheken zu Berlin. Verzeichniss der arabischen Handschriften, 10 vols, A. Ashner, Berlin, 1887-1899.
- GAL = Brockelmann, Carl, Geschichte der arabischen Litteratur, Brill, Leiden, 1898-1949.
- Deftar-i Kütüphan-i Velîüddin, Mahmut Bey Matbaası, Dersaadet, Istanbul, 1304/1886.
- EP² = The Encyclopaedia of Islam, 2nd ed., 12 vols, Brill, Leiden, 1954-2009.
- EP³ = The Encyclopaedia of Islam, 3rd ed., Brill, Leiden, online since 2007.
- Gacek, Adam, Catalogue of the Arabic Manuscripts in the Library of the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, London, 1981.
- Gilliot, Claude, « Textes arabes anciens édités en Égypte au cours des années 1987 à 1990 », MIDEO 20, 1991, pp. 301-504.
- Kaḥḥāla, ‘Umar Riḍā, Mu‘ğam al-mu‘allifin, 15 vols, al-Maktaba al-‘Arabiyya, Damascus, 1957-1961.
- Mingana, Alphonse, Catalogue of the Arabic Manuscripts in the John Rylands Library, Manchester, The Manchester University Press, Manchester, 1934.
- al-Mu‘allimī, ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, Mu‘ğam mu‘allifi maḥṭūṭāt Maktabat al-Ḥaram al-Makki al-šarīf, Maktabat al-Malik Fahd al-Waṭaniyya, Riyadh, 1996.
- Muṭī‘ al-Raḥmān, Muḥammad b. Sayyid Aḥmad & ‘Īd, ‘Ādil b. Ğamīl b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, al-Fihris al-muḥtaṣar li-maḥṭūṭāt Maktabat al-Ḥaram al-Makki al-šarīf, 4 vols, Maktabat al-Malik Fahd al-Waṭaniyya, Mecca, 2006-2007.
- Rescher, Otto, “Arabische Handschriften der Köprülü-Bibliothek”, Westasiatische Studien 14, 2-3, 1911, pp. 163-198.
- Rieu, Charles, Catalogus codicum manuscriptorum orientalium qui in museo britannico asservantur. Pars secunda, codices Arabicos amplectens, London, 1846.
- , Catalogus codicum manuscriptorum orientalium qui in museo britannico asservantur. Pars secunda, codices Arabicos amplectens. Supplementum, London, 1871.
- Şeşen, Ramazan, İzgi, Cevat & Akpınar, Cemil (eds.), Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Köprülü Library, 3 vols, OIC Research Center for Islamic History, Art and Culture, Istanbul, 1406/1986.
- Ṭalas, Muḥammad As‘ad, al-Kaššāf ‘an maḥṭūṭāt ḥazā’ in kutub al-awqāf, Maṭba‘at al-‘Anī, Baghdad, 1953.

Primary Sources

- Abū al-Fidā, ‘Imād al-Dīn Ismā‘īl, al-Muḥtaṣar fi aḥbār al-bašar, 4 vols, al-Maṭba‘a al-Ḥusayniyya, Cairo, 1325/1907.
- al-‘Aynī, Badr al-Dīn, Iqd al-ğumān fi tāriḥ ahl al-zamān, Muḥammad Muḥammad Amīn (ed.), 4 vols, al-Hay‘a al-Miṣriyya al-‘Āmma li-l-Kitāb, 1987.
- Ibn al-Dawādārī, Kanz al-durar wa-ğāmi‘ al-ğurar, 9 vols, Franz Steiner Verlag, Wiesbaden, 1960-1982.
- Ibn Ḥaldūn, Tāriḥ Ibn Ḥaldūn al-musammā Dīwān al-mubtada’ wa-l-ḥabar fi tāriḥ al-‘Arab wa-l-Barbar wa-man ‘āsarabum min dawī al-ša’n al-akbar, Ḥalīl Şaḥḥāda (ed.), 8 vols, Dār al-Fikr, Beirut, 1988.
- Ibn Ḥallikān, Ibn Khallikān’s Biographical Dictionary, Baron Mac Guckin de Slane (trans.), 4 vols, Paris, 1842-1871.
- , Wafayāt al-a’yān wa-anbā’ abnā’ al-zamān, Iḥsān ‘Abbās (ed.), 8 vols, Dār Şādir, Beirut, 1977.
- Ibn Maṭrūḥ, Ğamāl al-Dīn Yaḥyā, Dīwān, SOAS Arabic Ms 13248.
- , Dīwān, Yūsuf al-Nabhānī (ed.), Maṭba‘at al-Ğawā’ib, Constantinople, 1298/1881.
- , Dīwān, Ğawda Amīn (ed.), Dār al-Ṭaqāfa al-‘Arabiyya, Cairo, 1989.
- , Dīwān, ‘Awad Muḥammad al-Şālīḥ in ‘A.M. al-Şālīḥ (ed.), Ğamāl al-Dīn b. [sic] Yaḥyā b. Maṭrūḥ: hayātuhu wa-ši‘rubu, Manşūrāt Ğāmi‘at Qāryūnus, Benghazi, 1995.
- , Dīwān, Ḥusayn Naşşār (ed.), Maṭba‘at Dār al-Kutub wa-l-Waṭā’iq al-Qawmiyya, Cairo, 2009.

- Ibn Rašīq al-Qayrawānī, al-ʿUmda fi maḥāsin al-šiʿr wa-ādābihi wa-naqdihī, Muḥammad Muḥyī al-Dīn ʿAbd al-Ḥamīd (ed.), al-Maktaba al-Tiḡāriyya al-Kubrā, Cairo, 1955 [repr. Dār al-Rašād al-Ḥadīṭa, Casablanca, n.d.].
- Ibn Sanāʾ al-Mulk, Dīwān, Muḥammad ʿAbd al-Ḥaqq (ed.), Hyderabad, 1958; repr. Beirut, 1975.
- , Dīwān, Muḥammad Ibrāhīm Naṣr (ed.), 2 vols, Dār al-Kitāb al-ʿArabī, Cairo, 1969.
- Ibn Taḡribirdī, al-Manḥal al-šāfi wa-l-mustawfi baʿd al-Wāfi, Muḥammad Muḥammad Amīn (ed.), 8 vols, al-Hayʾa al-Miṣriyya al-ʿĀmma li-l-Kitāb, Cairo, 1984-1999.
- , al-Nuḡūm al-zāhira fi mulūk Miṣr wa-l-Qāhira, 16 vols, al-Muʾassasa al-Miṣriyya al-ʿĀmma li-l-Taʿlif wa-l-Tarḡama wa-l-Ṭibāʿa wa-l-Naṣr, Cairo, 1963-1971.
- al-ʿInnābī, Šihāb al-Dīn Abū al-ʿAbbās, Nuzḥat al-abṣār fi maḥāsin al-aṣʿār, al-Sanūsī, al-Sayyid Muṣṭafā & Luṭf Allāh, ʿAbd al-Laṭīf Aḥmad (eds.), Dār al-Qalam, Kuwait, 1986.
- al-Kutubī, Muḥammad b. Šākir, Fawāt al-wafāyāt wa-l-ḍayl ʿalayhā, Iḥsān ʿAbbās (ed.), 5 vols, Dār Šādir, Beirut, 1973-1974.
- al-Qalqaṣandī, Ṣubḥ al-aʿšā fi šināʿat al-inšāʿ, 14 vols, Dār al-Kutub al-Miṣriyya, Cairo, 1913-1919.
- al-Šafādī, Ḥalīl b. Aybak, al-Wāfi bi-l-wafāyāt, Helmut Ritter et al. (eds.), 30 vols, Franz Steiner Verlag, Wiesbaden, 1931-2007.
- al-Šawkānī, al-Badr al-ṭālīʿ bi-maḥāsin man baʿda al-qarn al-sābiʿ, Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd Allāh al-ʿAmrī (ed.), Dār al-Fikr, Damascus, 1998.
- al-Suyūṭī, Ḥusn al-muḥāḍara fi aḥbār Miṣr wa-l-Qāhira, Muḥammad Abū al-Faḍl Ibrāhīm (ed.), 2 vols, ʿĪsā al-Bābī al-Ḥalabī, Cairo, 1967-1968.
- al-Yūnīnī, Ḍayl Mirʾāt al-zamān, 4 vols, Dāʾirat al-Maʿārif al-ʿUṭmāniyya, Hyderabad, 1954-1961.

Secondary Sources

- Alwan, Mohammed B., "The History and Publications of al-Jawāʾib Press", MELA Notes 11, May 1977, pp. 4-7.
- ʿAmr, Šādī Ibrāhīm Ḥasan, Dīwān Šihāb al-Dīn b. al-Ḥiyamī (602-685 [a.]h[.]). Dirāsa wa-taḥqīq, MA thesis, Hebron University, 1426/2005.
- Arberry, A[rthur] J[ohn], Mystical Poems of Rūmī, annotated and prepared by Hasan Javādī, University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 2009.
- Cachia, Pierre, The Arch Rhetorician or The Schemer's Skimmer: A Handbook of Late Arabic badīʿ drawn from ʿAbd al-Ghanī an-Nābulṣī's Nafaḥāt al-Azhār ʿalā Nasamāt al-Aṣḥār, Harrassowitz, Wiesbaden, 1998.
- Carra de Vaux, B. Fahd, T., EP, IX, 1996, p. 440, s.v. "Šhiḳḳ".
- Cerquiglini, Bernard, Éloge de la variante, Seuil, Paris, 1989.
- van Gelder, Geert Jan, Sound and Sense in Classical Arabic Poetry, Harrassowitz, Wiesbaden, 2012.
- Gruendler, Beatrice, "Qaṣīda. Its Reconstruction in Performance", in Gruendler, Beatrice & Cooperson, Michael (eds.), Classical Arabic Humanities in their Own Terms: Festschrift for Wolfhart Heinrichs on his 65th Birthday Presented by his Students and Colleagues, Brill, Leiden, 2008, pp. 325-389.
- Heinrichs, W.P., EP, VIII, 1993, p. 368-370, s.v. "Radīf".
- Humphreys, R. Stephen, From Saladin to the Mongols: The Ayyubids of Damascus, 1193-1260, State University of New York Press, Albany, 1977.
- Levi Della Vida G., Fahd, T., EP, IX, 1995, pp. 84-85, s.v. "Saḥīḥ b. Rabīʿa".
- al-Munaḡḡid, Šalāḥ al-Dīn & Wild, Stefan (eds.), Zwei Beschreibungen des Libanon, ʿAbdalḡanī an-Nābulṣīs Reise durch die Biqāʿ und al-ʿUṭaifīs Reise nach Tripolis, Beiruter Texte und Studien 21, Franz Steiner Verlag, Wiesbaden, 1979.
- Rikabi, J., EP, III, 1968, p. 875, s.v. "Ibn Maṭrūḥ".
- Rippin, A., EP, VIII, 1994, p. 689, s.v. "Sabt".
- Roper, Geoffrey J., "Al-Jawāʾib Press and the Edition and Transmission of Arabic Manuscript Texts in the 19th Century", in Pfeiffer, Judith & Kropp, Manfred (eds.), Theoretical Approaches to the Transmission and Edition of Oriental Manuscripts, Beiruter Texte und Studien 111, Ergon, Würzburg, 2007, pp. 237-247.
- Šābir, ʿUmar Wafīq, Ġamāl al-Dīn Yaḥyā b. ʿĪsā Ibn Maṭrūḥ 592-649 h.: ḥayātuhu wa-šiʿruhu, MA Thesis, The University of Jordan, Amman, 1994.
- Stoetzer, W., EP, VIII, 1994, pp. 583-585, s.v. "Rubāʿī (pl. Rubāʿiyyāt), 3. in Arabic".
- Talib, Adam, "The Many Lives of Arabic Verse", JAL 44, 3, 2013, pp. 257-292.
- , EP, 2014, 1, s.v. "Dūbayt (a) in Arabic".
- , EP, 2016, s.v. "Ibn Maṭrūḥ".
- , How Do you Say "Epigram" in Arabic?, Brill, Leiden, Forthcoming (2016).

